A groundbreaking, ceremonial spade marks the first step in establishing a research and development center near the existing PECOFacet facility on Washington Avenue.

Members of the Perry family, which established Perry Equipment Company in 1939, executive from parent company CLARCOR, local government and business leaders and PECOFacet employees attended the event, which provided insight into the project.

According to a press release, the Dunman Perry Research Center, named in honor of the company’s founder, will complement PECOFacet’s already established legacy of research in filtration equipment design and manufacturing.

PECOFacet President Scott Thompson explained the center is expected to be about 50,000 square feet and eventually be a multimillion dollar project.

The 21-year-old Pachall, who was arrested just after midnight when he was pulled over after running a stop sign near TCU's Fort Worth campus, police Sgt. Pedro Criado said. Pachall's blood-alcohol level was above the legal limit of 0.08 percent, Criado said.

"It killed my mom and sister," Evans said.

"What" for dispatcher and Evans repeat the statement.

During the nearly 25-minute call that ended around 12:30 a.m., Evans said he had been drinking and smoking marijuana and admitted to police that he had killed his mother and sister.

"I don't have a motor," Parker County Sheriff's spokesman Jay Fowler. "This is really going to motivate the family to establish the center near the Baker's outstanding industrial partner is CLARCOR Chairman Norm Johnson.

"I cannot say enough how much it means to the family to have this facility to honor our father's memory," said Nickerson, adding that the family was working diligently to innovate existing lube oil filter. "We're out there, we're making sure that the family's name is recognized, and that we're involved in the company's trajectory."

"It was important to the family to get a home in the area and to be near the family," said Nickerson. "And I think one of the reasons that they're there is because we have a steep learning curve and we're trying to get used to the family."
